Metro Theatre presents GO BACK FOR MURDER March 21st to April 18th

Metro's sixth show of its 52nd season has all the intrigue of classic Agatha Christie....a disturbing family secret, "skeletons" in the closet, interesting suspects, red herrings and long-held secrets.

(March 10, 2015) The play is based on Agatha Christie's book Five Little Pigs and was adapted by the author herself. The story deals with Carla Crale trying to prove her mother (who died in prison) innocent of poisoning her father. Aided by a young lawyer, Justin Fogg, the brave female ends up travelling back in time to decode the suspicious event that occurred 16 years earlier, she must Go Back for Murder. The audience is asked to absorb the clues, the props, and the alibis....but more importantly to read between the lines of the characters themselves, as the same events are retold from several standpoints.

Director Joe Hinks explains "This is not your usual Christie; at the beginning we already know who has died and who was convicted...the exciting thing about this play is that a determined gal forces us to go back in time to find out what really happened. It's got flashbacks and false testimony, red herrings and femme fatales, everything you could want from a whodunit!"

This production is directed by Joe Hinks, produced by Don Briard, stage managed by Anna Kim, and features: Sachi Lovatt as Carla Crale and Kevin Ibbotson as Justin Fogg.
